Transition is the process of moving from school to adult life. It is a time for students and families to think about life after high school. To begin to identify and work toward future goals.

By law, transition planning in school must begin by age 14, or grade 9. Students and families connect with the community services and resources they may need after high school.

All people with disabilities should live a life of purpose, dignity, choices, and happiness. Even if they need some level of support.

Clay County Community Transition Interagency Committee (CTIC)

CTIC is a partnership of service providers and families.

The committee works together to share resources and develop programs to support youth with disabilities,

What is CTIC?

Community Transition
Interagency Committee.

CTICs were organized to promote effective transition services through community collaboration for youth. The goal is to help them prepare for adult life.

CTIC provides students, parents and professionals an opportunity to improve transition services for students with disabilities in our community.

CTIC committee members provide information, referral, and services in the 3 areas of transition:

- ◆ Employment
- ◆ Post secondary Education & Training
- ◆ Independent Living
 - Housing
 - Recreation & Leisure
 - Community Participation

Transition teams identify

- ◆ strengths
- ◆ preferences
- ◆ choices

to build a support plan that can help young adults plan for the future.

CTIC ACTIVITIES:

- ◆ Regular meetings
- ◆ Bi-annual Transition Workshop for students
- ◆ Public Awareness
- ◆ Transition Activities related to the three areas of transition
- ◆ Educational opportunities
